

Story about Čech (Czech)

There was a country around the river Vistula and there lived a nation called SLAVS. There were many of them and the land didn't give them enough food. Because of this there were many conflicts and fights. One of the leaders - Čech and his brother Lech decided to take their tribe to a new fertile and peaceful land. They set off to the west. They marched ^{for} very long, through deep forests, large meadows, they were evading swamps, and were fighting wild animals. They crossed three large rivers, Odra, Łaba and Vltava, when it was almost autumn, the people wanted to settle down. They were at the foot of the hill - Čech climbed the mountain in the morning, he looked around and saw beautiful land, many forests and clean rivers. He asked his people how they wanted to call this land. They said the land should be named after him Čechy (Czech). They settled here and had good times. Čech's brother Lech took his tribe after some time and they settled in a different part not far from his brother Čech.
